LIGHT AND SHADOW.

If love be sweet, then bitter death must be If lave is bittor, sweet is death to me,

Why should I not look happy-The world is all so bright? You know he said be loved me; He told me so last night; He loves me so!

Such words of love he whispered, I feit my blushes rise : But half '(he said) he told not, The rest was in his eyes: Ha loves me so!

He said to watch and guard me Would be his tenderest care; If I am has beside him. Joy will be everywhere; He loves me so

If love will make life happy,
Mine will be very bright,
Bis love will shed a lastre,
And fill it all with light: He loves me so!

Then should I not be happy-The world is all so bright? You know he said he loved me-He loves me so!

Why should I not look incomful The world is all so sad? Because, you know I love him: Such love is never glad: I love him so !

I've listencii for his footstep

All through the weary day, Bot old twould not be weary, If one word would be say: I love him so! Sometimes I chought be loved me,

Then sat the world is bright:
But now all hope is ended,
Quite dead since yesternight:
I loved him so! 'Twas in the crowd of dancers:

felt that be wasnigh, ged so for his coming;

He came and passed me by I saw him flitting past; Burne he never heeded-

O God! that dream is post, I love him so ! Then should I not look mournful Twitt ne er be bright upnin : For still, you know, I love him,

Such love is only pain :

I love him so !

HOW VICTORIA REPROVED A FLIRT-ING DAUGUYER. - An ancelote illustrating Victora's admirable good sense and strict domestic discipline, is related by one who witnessed the occurrence. One day, when the Queen was present in her carriage at the military review, the princess royal, then rather a wilful girl of about thirteen, sitting on the front sent, seemed disposed to be rather familiar and connettish with some young officers of the escart. Her majesty give several reproving looks without avail, "winked at her, but she wouldn't stay winked." At length in flirting her handker. chief over the carriage, she dropped it too. evidently not accidently. Instantly two or three young heroes sprung from their saddles to return it to her fair hand, but the awful voice of royalty stayed them, "Stop gentleman," exclaimed the Gucen, "leave it just where it is. Now, my daughter, get down from the carriage and pick up your handkerchief." There was no help for it The royal footman let down the step for the little royal lady, who proceeded to lift from the dust the pretty piece of cambrie and lace. She blushed a good deal, though she tossed her head saucily, but the mortifying lesson may have nipped in the bud her first impulse toward coquetry. It was hard of Spartan discipline?

A Sea Sick Tragedian.

Sea sickness is a sad leveler, to which the strangest minds succemb leaving nothing but the desire to touch terra firma again. An eminent artist, who has recently made a most successful tour in California, returned east by steamer. Scarcely had the ship got out of sight of land before the Thespian was laid by the heels with mat de mer. In the depths of his dispair he called for the Captain, and when that worthy arrived, the tragedian gazed at him for a few moments and then asked:

"A-r-r-e-you the Captain ?" "I have that honor," said the son of Neptune.

Ver-r-v well-sir. I want you to rur this blasted ship ashore. I'll pay for her, hull, engines and cargo." The Captain smiled and told his unhanpy passenger it was impossible. Ver-r-y well, sir-r-r. Tie her to a rock. then, and stop this blasted rolling."

Being assured that this was also imsible, the wretched actor retired to his statewrongs that burn into the heart so deep room, and lying there in mortal agony, cursthat they live from generation to generation ed the sea and all that appertained to it with oaths both loud and deep.
